Time	Session Topic
1:45 PM – 2:45 PM	Establishing Faculty Development as a Strategy for Driving Student Success and College of Business Culture For many students, faculty are the most critical and impactful dimension of their learning experience. Establishing strategic faculty development initiatives can improve student engagement, retention, and overall success. Faculty development initiatives can also promote a sense of meaning, belonging and cohesion among faculty. While Deans and other academic leadership understand the value of faculty development, due to endless competing priorities, faculty development is frequently left to sporadic, disconnected professional development experiences. Join us in a discussion about strategic faculty development initiatives. Come prepared to share your own faculty development best practices while learning from other academic leaders.
2:45 PM – 3:00 PM	Refreshment Break
3:00 PM – 4:30 PM	Open Forum Discussion "What's Your One Thing?" "What's Your One Thing?" is an opportunity for all of us to share a challenge and/or success while having the opportunity to discuss with and receive insight from peers as we envision the future of Business Schools. Most of our institutions are facing similar challenges. These challenges may include a wide array of topics such as student recruitment, retention, faculty hiring, pay gaps, credentialing, managing diminishing resources, utilization of advisory boards, the changing student body, content delivery, mobile learning, federal compliance and more. Join us as we collaboratively discuss challenges and best practices with Business School leaders.
